THE RESIDENCE

Chalet Albert-Luc

Chalet Albert-Luc is a beautifully appointed alpine retreat in Verbier, Switzerland, extending across some 350 square metres and welcoming up to ten guests plus two more. Set within a tranquil, secluded enclave, the chalet is just a three-minute drive from Place Centrale and four minutes from the Medran lift station, offering a rare sense of privacy without sacrificing proximity to the vibrant heart of one of the Alps' most celebrated resorts. The striking white-washed wood exterior lends the property an authentically alpine character, immediately at ease within its magnificent Swiss surroundings.

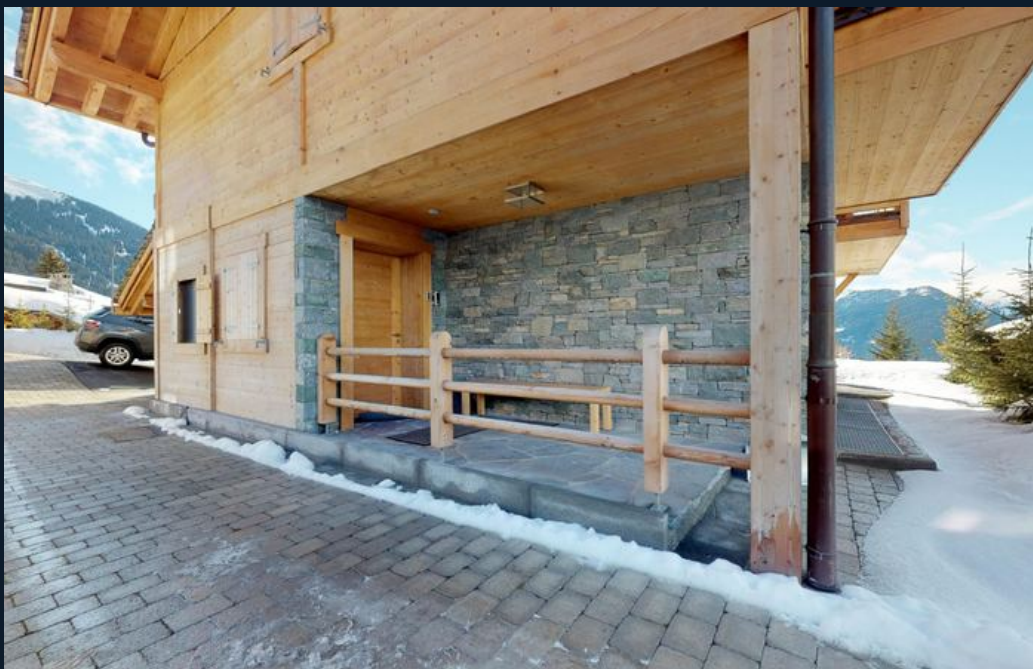

The main floor is centred on an elegant open-plan living, dining and kitchen space, where a sleek glossy grey kitchen island overlooks a dining table seating ten. An L-shaped sofa gathers warmly around a wood-burning fireplace, while generous French doors draw in natural light and open onto a wrap-around balcony with sweeping mountain views, stairs descending to an expansive garden below. A double bedroom with en-suite shower room completes this level. The top floor houses four further bedrooms, including a master suite with an en-suite bathroom offering both a bath and shower, a television and private balcony access, a second double room with equivalent en-suite facilities and balcony, and a family suite comprising a double bedroom and a quad bunk room sharing a well-appointed bathroom with both bath and shower.

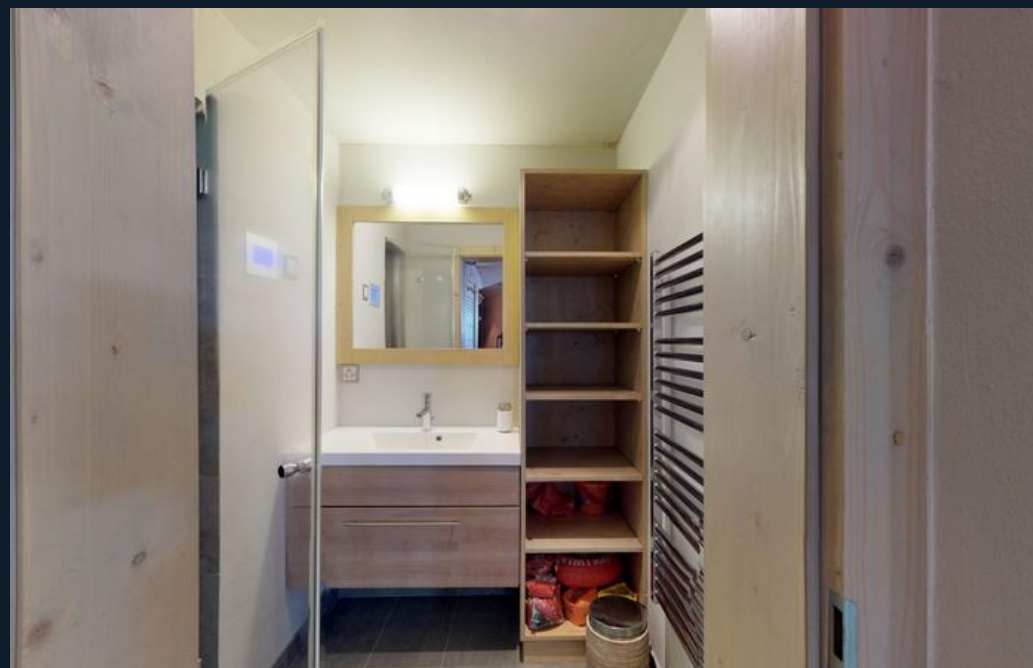

The lower ground floor elevates Chalet Albert-Luc into a property of genuine distinction, housing a private spa with a dedicated relaxation area, an indoor pool and a hammam. A ski and boot room on the same level ensures that returning from Verbier's exceptional slopes is as effortless as possible. Whether gathered around the fireplace after a long day on the mountain or unwinding beside the indoor pool, guests will find Chalet Albert-Luc a refined and restorative base from which to savour all that Verbier has to offer.
